Although I did not like the change of professors in the middle of the semester, Dr. Girard went above and beyond to ensure the transition was smooth and as stress free as possible. I like that Dr. Girard took the time to make individual videos when giving feedback on our case studies.

Dr. Girard has done a great job by coming into this online class unexpected, and being able to provide learning material. He was very fair with the previous work that was done in the class.

I'm not sure how well I would have faired in this course had Dr. Girard not taken over. Before his intervention, this was the most poorly organized class I have seen on D2L. Students were not able to tell when things were due, assignments from a previous version of the course were still active, and assignments/quizzes would expire before the actual due date. Dr. Breese seemed to be out of touch with the course and did little to rectify issues the students were having. This all changed when Dr. Girard became the instructor. His quick thinking allowed for a complete overhaul of the curriculum with the little time left in the course. I applaud his effort because I feel this was the only fair way to continue on with the course. It is obvious that Dr. Girard is knowlegable in the subject matter. I believe he is a great asset to MGA.

Professor Girard did a great job finishing up the semester.

Professor Breese and Professor Girard are about as polar opposite of eachother as can be when it comes to online teaching. The first half of this semester was a trainwreck. The due dates were not right, the syllabus was from another semester, and most of the outline was nigh impossible to follow. Getting anything done in that course was incredibly difficult, and there appeared to be no real structure to the course at all.

After Professor Girard took over at the half, everything got better. His ccourse outline was perfectly laid out. His lesson start dates were as clearly defined as they could have been, his due dates were incredibly simple, and he did a great job with underlining exactly what needed to be done each week. Professor Girard set this course up exactly in a way that an online course should be. It was laid out plain and simple, easy to follow, and his communication with his students was perfect.

Professor Girard was able to take a struggling class and, in the short time remaining in the semester, redesign assignments that allowed us to learn what we needed to know from the course but not feel overwhelmed with the workload. I appreciated his individual feedback to students and his concern for our success.
