I have enjoyed this class a great deal and Professor Girard is very personable and responds quickly and truly seems to care. However, I despise group projects. I was placed on a team where I have completed almost this entire course by myself. All of the assignments are supposed to be a team activity culminating in a team group project. We are now 10 days out of submitting and my "team" has not contributed at all to much of anything. I understand the need for group projects as a teaching tool and life lesson. However, I can not lead a bad team if they never respond to any messages or acknowledge my existence. I cannot give Dr. Girard a bad review because I genuinely like this class and him as an instructor. I would only suggest he change his grading. The group project counts for half of my overall grade. Now, it has to be said that he gives the opportunity to "vote" a bad apple off of the island. In my case my whole team would be voted off and I would be doing everything solo, which is what I am doing anyway. So, I do not have a problem with a group project, I have an issue with it counting for 50% of my grade when I am on a team by myself essentially.

I normally don't like group project online classes. Fortunately for me in this class I was placed in a strong group and we were able to complete the course.

One of the best instructors I've had. He made the course fun and manageable for everyone. This was also the best teamwork I've had with a group in any of my classes. The way he constructed the assignments and projects made it easier to work with others. The videos were great as well because he explained everything in a short and timely manner.
